Processional music is exactly what it sounds like: The song or songs that play when important family members, your bridesmaids and groomsmen, and the bride, make their way down the aisle. "Oftentimes one song is played for the parents and wedding party and then a second song is played when the second partner enters," Although you'll likely have soft tunes playing as guests arrive, your processional music needs to be different enough from that background playlist as it lets everyone know the wedding is about to begin. This is why more and more couples are choosing special songs, instead of traditional ones, to begin their big day.
